Dear Parents/carers,

Happy Half-term!

Thank you all for your ongoing support throughout this tricky term. Both you and the children have done an amazing job in difficult circumstances.

A huge well done to all!

I'm sure you'll agree that the staff have been amazing in balancing face to face provision with remote learning on top of juggling their own family commitments. Once again, I have been blown away by how quickly they have all adapted their practice to keep the children engaged and learning and I am so grateful for their perseverance and resilience when faced with challenges.

I managed to virtually hijack the Teams calls of our KS2 children this morning to congratulate them on their hard work and promised them that I would work hard to keep pushing key messages to our community so that case rates stay low. If we all work together to make this happen, then hopefully we will also see them back in school as soon as possible, but for now, they will need to keep up the good work from home.

All of the children have been directed to take a well-earned break from school work next week and try to enjoy the half-term break as best they can, given the restrictions. I hope that all parents and carers also manage to take a breather over the next week and we should all keep our fingers crossed that we can exit this lockdown as soon as possible.

Please keep a watchful eye for any official government press releases - particularly the 3-week review next Friday when we hope to have some more positive news. As always, please be cautious when reading news articles or social media posts online as often, sensational headlines can be misleading and purely to create effect or shock for the reader! (Always make sure the information comes from a trusty source).

We will do the final review of the risk assessment on Monday 22nd and will be holding important meetings with staff on this day to ensure a rigorous implementation of the additional control measures necessary for the wider reopening on Tuesday 23rd February.

Thank you again for your ongoing support. Wishing you all a safe and enjoyable half-term break.
