

Dear Parent/Carer

Mrs Lewis - Year 3/ Year 4 - week commencing 8th March 2021

I hope you all had a lovely weekend and enjoyed Welsh week. I received some fantastic work thank you! This week's work will include a project-based activity and the opportunity for you to be creative. I hope that you will bring whatever you have made into school so you can share your wonderful work with your friends.

This week is Fair Trade Fortnight and as an eco-school we would always celebrate. Therefore, this week's work will also involve learning about Fair Trade and completing the attached activities.

All work to be shared with me WestacottL2@hwbcymru.net

The Lady of the Lake

A Welsh Legend

Retold by Jenny Nimmo

In the Black Mountains of Wales, there is a beautiful lake called Llyn y fan fach- Lake of the Little Place. People tell a very strange story about this lake.

The story begins with magic, but ends with something true and wonderful; something that exists to this very day.

Long, long ago there was a shepherd called Gwyn. He lived with his mother on a farm near the town of Myddfai.

The life of a shepherd was very lonely. All day and all night, Gwyn had to guard his sheep on the wild, empty mountains. He longed for a wife, but how would he ever find one?

One day Gwyn took his sheep to graze beside Llyn y fan fach. At night he wrapped himself in a thick cloak and sat down to guard his flock. In those days wolves still lived in the mountains.

As Gwyn dozed beside a rock, he saw three ghostly figures gliding out of the lake. They began to walk through the flock of sheep.

They were women and they looked like sisters. The one who came closest to Gwyn was the most beautiful. Her golden hair floated to her waist, and her long blue dress shimmered in the moonlight.

Gwyn jumped up. He took some bread from his pocket and offered it to the woman. She smiled, took the bread and bit it.

"It's too hard. You won't catch me."

Then she threw down the bread and ran back into the lake with her sisters. Gwyn could hear them laughing under the water. The sound was like music.

Next day Gwyn ran back to the farm to fetch a loaf of soft bread. He hurried to the lake and waited for the three women to appear.

That night, when the moon was very bright, the three sisters rose out of the water. Gwyn held out his bread. The most beautiful sister smiled, took the bread and bit it. She threw it down. Then she laughed at Gwyn and ran back to the lake with her sisters.

"It's too soft. I'll never marry you."

Gwyn had fallen in love. But the beautiful sister would only tease him. Sadly, he walked round the lake, wondering what to do.

When the sun rose he saw something floating in the water. He picked it up. It was bread. Not too hard and not too soft.

That night the three sisters appeared again. Gwyn held out the bread from the lake. The woman he loved took it.

She bit the bread and smiled.

"It's good."

"Stay with me and be my bride" said Gwyn.

The lady of the lake looked at her sisters. Their eyes sparkled with mystery.

"I'll give you your answer tomorrow. If you can pick me out from my sisters, I'll be your bride."

As she stepped back into the water, she tripped on a pebble. Gwyn saw that the strap on her sandal was broken.

The next night, when the three sisters appeared, it was so dark that Gwyn couldn't see their faces. He didn't know which one to choose. The woman laughed at him.

He had been tricked. Then he noticed that the sister who stood nearest to him had broken the strap of her sandal.

"It's you. I choose you." said Gwyn

They stopped laughing. Two sisters ran into the water, but the third came towards him:

"Sometimes you won't understand the things I do."

"I will try to be a good wife, but don't expect me to be like other women."

"Whatever I do, you must never strike me."

"I 'll never strike you." said Gwyn.

Again she warned him.

"If you strike me three times, I shall have to leave you."

"It won't happen." said Gwyn.

The Lady of the Lake turned and sang to the water. Out of the lake came three speckled cows, two grey oxen and a white bull. When Gwyn led his new bride home, the six creatures from the lake followed them.

The couple were married and lived very happily. They had three sons. The boys learned how to farm, and they also learned the ways of their mother.

Gwyn's wife grew wild herbs in a small garden behind the house. She taught her sons how to look after them, and how to cook them.

One day, Gwyn and his wife went to the church. They hadn't walked far when Gwyn's wife said:

"I'm tired of walking and my hands are cold."

"I'll go and look for your gloves, while you fetch the horses."

His wife agreed, but when he brought her the gloves, he found that she was daydreaming in the garden. Gwyn tapped his wife's shoulder.

"You said you'd fetch horses."

"That's one."

Gwyn didn't know what she meant.

A few weeks later, the couple were invited to a wedding. In the middle of the wedding, Gwyn's wife suddenly burst into tears. Gwyn patted his wife's shoulder.

"This is a happy day. Why are you crying?"

Because their troubles are beginning, and so are yours. That's twice now you have hit me. The third will be the last.

For a while, Gwyn was careful never to tap his wife but several weeks later, there was a funeral. In the most serious part of the funeral, his wife laughing. He tapped his wife's shoulder.

"Hush. You musn't laugh at a funeral."

I can't help it. I warned you that my ways were different. That's three times now you've hit me. Now I shall have to leave you.

Gwyn's wife went home. She called to her cows, to the oxen and to her white bull. The bull and the cows left the meadow, and, along with the oxen, followed their mistress.

The animals followed her across the mountains until they reached the lake. There, the lady and her animals walked into the deep waters of Llyn y fan fach and vanished. Gwyn's three sons missed their mother. They couldn't understand why she had left them.

Years later, when they were young men, a terrible sickness came to the Black Mountains. People began to die and no one knew how to save them. Gwyn and his sons waited in fear for the sickness to strike them.

Then, on a cold, bright night, the three young men heard their mother's voice on the wind. It was as strong as the tug of the moon on the sea.

Wrapped in their warm capes of sheeps' fleece, they trekked over the mountains until they came to Llyn y fan fach.

Their mother stood on the shore.

"It was so hard for me to leave you, but it was beyond my power to stay. I've returned to give you my secrets. They will save your lives and the lives of many others."

She gave her sons a small leather bag, full of herbs. And then she whispered her secrets so that, in the whole world, only her sons could hear them. When she had kissed them goodbye, she stepped back into the water, saying:

"You are doctors now, my sons. Use my herbs in the ways I have told you and they will never fail you."

The three young men went home with their mother's herbs. Some they planted and others they crushed and mixed and boiled until they had a strong medicine.

They poured the medicine into big stone pots, and they took it to the sick and the dying.

The sick got better and the dying recovered.

After that Gwyn's three sons often went to the lake. They would call to their mother and she would come and talk to them. She gave them advice and helped them with their troubles.

The three young men became known as the Doctors of Myddfai. They passed secret recipes on their children, and to their children's children.

And to this very day you can still see the herbs and potions that the Doctors of Myddfai once brewed in their little house in the mountains.

Did these potions come from the Lady of the Lake, or were they invented by generations of doctors from Myddfai? No one can be really sure.

Activity 2 - To write a description about a character from the story

Can you describe Gwyn's wife?

- Think about what she looked like.
- How she behaved - moved the things that she did.
- Use adjectives, verbs and similes.

Activity 3 - To create a character description about a made-up mythical creature

Griffin the Green Greedy Goblin

Griffin the green greedy goblin was a huge and lazy creature. He moved around the smelly black swamp like a slimy slug. Griffin had orange eyes like satsumas, a yellow stumpy tooth and orange warts covering his back. Griffin was able to magically vanish and appear wherever he wanted to. He loved to eat flies and caught them with his sticky pink tongue. Griffin spoke in a low gruff voice that scared everyone who came near the swamp.

Use the description above to help you make up your own mythical creature. Include a picture of your creature.

Remember to include adjectives, verbs, alliteration and similes.

Activity 4 - To read the information about Fair trade and answer the questions

Fair trade is a way of buying and selling products that allows the farmers to be paid a fair price for their produce and have better working conditions.

Trade is 'unfair' when farmers receive very low income and have poor conditions while the companies that sell their products make lots of money from them.

The Fairtrade Mark was introduced in 1994; it is a symbol awarded to products that are sold under certain fair-trading conditions.

Top 10 facts

1. There are over 4,500 Fairtrade mark products sold in the UK.
2. Products with Fairtrade Mark are sold in over 120 countries.
3. The Fairtrade Foundation was formed in 1992, with the Fairtrade Mark first being used in 1994, over 20 years ago now.
4. The first product to get the Fairtrade Mark was Green and Black's Maya Gold chocolate bar.
5. Divine chocolate is the only chocolate in the world to be fully owned by farmers.
6. The first ever UK Fairtrade Mark banana was sold in the year 2000.

7. A third of all bananas sold in the UK have a Fairtrade Mark.
8. There are over 1.4 million farmers and workers worldwide who work to produce Fairtrade products.
9. Fairtrade products include both food and non-food items- there are standards for each type of item that need to be achieved before it is classified as Fairtrade.
10. Fair trade towns are dedicated to supporting fair trade - there are over 550 in the UK alone.
